Global Insights on Postpartum: Perspectives from the Social Sciences

WORKSHOP

The postpartum period is a critical issue that merits increased attention and examination in the social sciences. Key questions include: 1) How the postpartum period is defined, understood and experienced cross-culturally; 2) How it shapes intimate relationships; and 3) How factors such as racial inequality, class, and gender shape access to resources, support networks, and healthcare. Contributions from this workshop will address these themes in various contexts, spanning Europe, the Americas, and India.
